HISTORY

Sand Moor Golf Club is a beautiful inland heathland course situated next to Eccup reservoir on the north side of Leeds with magnificent views of the surrounding countryside. The course with its sandy soil drains exceptionally well.

Founded in 1926, the major influence in the creation of the course was Yorkshire born Dr. Alister MacKenzie, designer of Augusta National. Dr. Alister was a member of the first Green Committee and was nominated as a Vice President from 1926 to 1930.

Changes to the course took place in the late 1960s with the advice from Henry Cotton and has recently been updated by renowned Architect, Andy Watson, with all bunkers remodelled and subtle changes made to help the course stay abreast of modern day equipment whilst remaining loyal to the original design.

Sand Moor has an impressive reputation for the standard of the golfers at the Club. These have included Amateur Champions Alex Kyle (1939) and Iain Pyman (1993), and English Champion Stuart Cage (1992). All represented Great Britain and Ireland in the Walker Cup.

Sand Moor Golf Club also has an outstanding record as Yorkshire Club Champions in 1992 through to 2000 and English Club Champions in 1994 and 1995. More recently, the Club has won the UK McKenzie Medallion in 1999, 2001 and 2003, the Hudson Trophy in 2001, the Colt Cup in 2002 and the Yorkshire Ladies 'A' Division championship in 2006 and 2009.
