

If you think that golf is a game for wealthy bankers, accountants, doctors and solicitors, then you're right, it is. But the vast majority of golfers are guys who work for a living, have a couple of kids and a mortgage and whose day to day life resembles the vast majority of people in the UK.

But then you have to wear funny clothes, and there's all those silly rules about dress codes, and what you can and cannot do in the bar. Again, nothing could be farther from the truth of golf today.

And no one would wish to play with a novice would they? You'd be surprised, higher handicaps are the norm in golf. A couple of lessons and you'd soon be at a standard that matches most of the players. Like any sport, how you go on after that depends on you.

Golf is an inclusive sport, available to men and women, young and old, where the handicap system allows you to compete against the best golfer in the club on an equal footing, or play a friendly game with your mates if that's your option.

It takes a bit of time to play eighteen holes, maybe a morning or an afternoon, but it's not expensive. Membership starts at £325 per annum via our points based PlayMoreGolf package which allows play every day of the week. That's just £6 per week. We offer also memberships with unlimited amount of play on specific days of the week too.

Sunday to Tuesday £395 per annum
Monday to Friday £705 per annum
Sunday to Friday £795 per annum
Sunday to Saturday £935 per annum

All of these can be paid monthly by direct debit via our finance company partner.

We do a trial membership too. For three months, you may play as much social golf as you like for £150, though competition golfers, do take priority if they are on the course. Come and see what it's like. There's an application for to download on the Membership & Subscriptions tab, or you can call us on 0161 3301537 Opt 1.
